Are you looking to gain some research experience?

The Interdisciplinary Behavioral Research Center is seeking undergraduate students who would like to gain experience in conducting human subjects research. The IBRC is part of the Duke Social Science Research Institute (SSRI) and is dedicated to providing research facilities to scholars in the social sciences.

Psychology majors and other students interested in social science human subjects research are especially encouraged to apply. No formal research experience is required.

There are currently spots open for the Fall 2018 term.

The IBRC RA program requires that students agree to volunteer for a minimum of 6 hours per week for the semester.

IBRC staff interviews each potential research assistant in advance of his or her involvement.

Please note the positions are unpaid; instead, students agree to volunteer their time in exchange for research experience.

Interested students should email Research Coordinator Tia Tyndal (tlt30@duke.edu) with their resume, a brief letter of interest, and schedule of weekly availability (if possible at this time).

Find out more about the IBRC RA Program at: https://ibrc.ssri.duke.edu/research-assistant-program